Rd Sharma Class 12 Ebook Free Download Pdfl OnlineQ: NSNotificationCenter - Main thread or background thread I have an app with a few views. I want to have some background tasks that can update the UI as needed. My problem is how I should send updates to the UI from those background threads? Should I create my own NotificationCenter class, or is there something already built-in? A: This is how I did it. You can get the Main Thread object using [NSThread mainThread] And then you can access the UIKit layer [UIApplication sharedApplication].delegate.window.rootViewController] Or the Window Controller [UIApplication sharedApplication].delegate.window.rootViewController] So you just send the notification from your background thread and have your UI thread process it. Red Bull motorsport boss Christian Horner has been ordered by the FIA to fill a gap in the FIA racing points system. The system has been in place since 2006 but as the FIA World Endurance Championship battles for LMP1 against the combined World Rally Championship, GT and GTE classes, the world champion title has been in the hands of Audi, Toyota and Porsche for the last four years. The FIA is due to rule for the 2016/17 season, but as this campaign began, the top three teams of the GTE class – Aston Martin, Ferrari and Porsche – will receive 5, 10 and 15 points, respectively, when they are classified first, second and third after three of six races. The fourth placed team receives 7.5 points, with 6.5 and 8.5 points for the fifth and sixth teams, as far down the list as the number one LMP1 car. Meanwhile, the top LMP1 teams receive 20, 30 and 40 points. Horner and his team are not making any extra effort to attract a driver and a sponsor because it cannot be helped. "We're not waiting for the FIA, we're racing," said Horner. "We're trying to do the best we can." "It's a situation where the top three GTE teams have five points per race," said a senior team official. "That's when the message comes from the FIA. Last time we were in this situation was in 2007, so we're already in the position. We're running third in 82138339de
