===== anpk I am very happy to see this. I don't have much to add as I was not working with StackOverflow, but it was certainly a major influencing factor in my life. StackOverflow helped me get my first programming job at age 16. I remember being so excited to get my job and get a salary that would allow me to buy an old bulky computer and then spending the rest of the summer downloading free software and learning things. Before I joined the Internet (1991), programming was kept by a tight knit group of people who shared everything. I guess we were much more unorganized back then, but the spirit was the same. After a long and difficult path to my first programming job, StackOverflow gave me the opportunity to have what was not possible before. ----- jakeonthemove I'm curious, why did SO's development team pick SO, I mean, there are many other great sites out there with similar or better topics than SO - HN being one of them, IMO. ~~~ skywing Probably because StackOverflow co-founders Yishan Wong and Joel Spolsky are very active on HN and even received the first Hacker News founder award last year (before I left, I used to contribute to HN pretty much every day). I haven't been active since I moved to Canada, but I'll try to come back some time soon and visit HN!
