U.S. Senator Tom Udall
(NM) announced today that he plans to convene a series of meetings with pharmaceutical companies regarding concerns about the U.S.'s proposed plan to import cheap drugs from Canada. The purpose of these meetings is to solicit feedback from pharmaceutical companies regarding the plan's impact on key U.S.

industries – including lower prices and increased competition – and to identify other solutions that could offset the negative effects of the plan. “The U.S. needs to look at the potential impact of importing lower-cost drugs from Canada and ensure that any changes are not going to hurt New Mexicans,” said Udall. “I will be speaking with pharmaceutical companies in the coming weeks to gather their feedback on the plan and to discuss possible alternatives to address these concerns.” Udall announced his intention to convene meetings with pharmaceutical companies in March. As part of that effort, he met with representatives from pharmaceutical companies such as Eli Lilly and Janssen, and invited representatives from the National Rural Health Association, the National Chamber of Commerce and other health care trade groups.

While New Mexico ranks first in the nation for per capita health care costs, and medical costs in New Mexico have consistently risen faster than inflation over the past twenty years, New Mexico is one of the few states that do not participate in the federal Medicare or Medicaid programs. As a result, New Mexicans pay a larger share of their health care costs - including prescription drug costs - than do their counterparts in other states. c6a93da74d
